New Center for Womens Health Opens In New York City

First New York City Medical Practice to Offer Two New Women's Health Services For Family Planning and Infertility

New York, NY – December 8, 2009 – Gianna – The Catholic Healthcare Center for Women, sponsored by Saint Vincent Catholic Medical Centers (Saint Vincent's), held a blessing and ribbon cutting today to celebrate the opening of the Center, which will offer women both primary care and specialized OB/GYN care in the same office. The Center is committed to providing authentically Catholic healthcare for women consistent with Catholic medical ethics. The opening was timed to coincide with the Feast of the Immaculate Conception.

"We are very pleased, and it is appropriate that we are here today on the Feast of the Immaculate Conception to open the Gianna Center," said Sister Dorothy Metz, president of the Sisters of Charity and sponsor of Saint Vincent's. "The Center offers Catholic women, as well as women of other faith traditions, a new alternative for comprehensive healthcare including primary care, obstetrics, natural family planning, and treatment for infertility that honors their dignity and the sanctity of human life."

Gianna is the first medical practice in New York City to provide a new, natural, scientifically based approach to monitoring and maintaining a woman's reproductive health and fertility. The Center's two new programs – the Creighton Model FertilityCare System and NaProTechnology – follow the Ethical and Religious Directives for Catholic Healthcare Services.

"The work of the Gianna Center, its physicians and staff is at the heart of the Catholic mission of Saint Vincent's," said Henry Amoroso, President and CEO of Saint Vincent's. "The Gianna Center reflects our values and an ultimate respect for the sanctity of all human life."

The Creighton Model FertilityCare System involves a modern approach to natural family planning. It helps women identify the physical signs of fertility, and can be used to achieve or avoid pregnancy with a high rate of effectiveness.

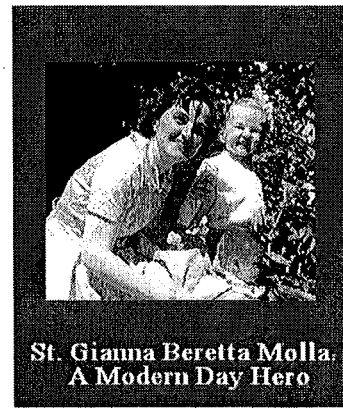

NaProTechnology is a new approach to managing women's reproductive and gynecologic disorders that works cooperatively with the woman's naturally-occurring fertility cycle to correct underlying problems. Based on 30 years of research, NaProTechnology has made it possible for physicians who use this approach to help infertile couples conceive a pregnancy. NaProTechnology is believed to be as successful as IVF, but unlike IVF, does not create or destroy embryos, making it acceptable to people of all faith traditions.

"Among the services that we are providing, NaProTechnology makes it possible for us to help couples conceive children in a manner respecting their dignity," stated Dr. Kyle Beiter, attending obstetrician and gynecologist at Gianna.

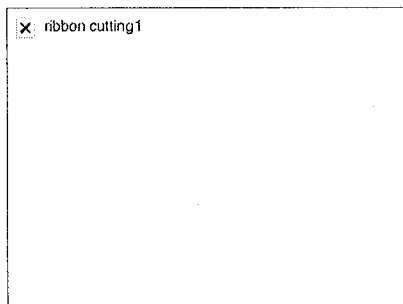

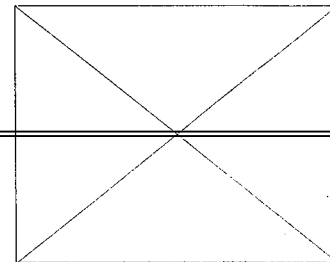

"We are excited to be the first medical practice in New York City to offer these two new women's health services, the Creighton Model Fertility Care System and NaProTechnology," said Dr. Anne Mielnik, Director of the Gianna Center.

Dr. Beiter is one of just a few fellowship-trained NaProTechnology surgeons in the United States, with dedicated training in pelvic reconstructive surgery, a specialty that forms the cornerstone of the NaProTechnology approach to infertility. Dr. Mielnik completed her Family Medicine training in 2009, and her NaProTechnology training in 2006. She is a family physician with a concentration in women's health and infertility.

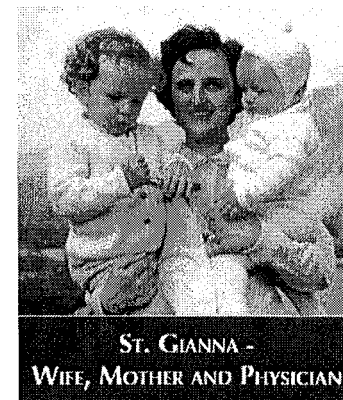

The Gianna Center is located at 15 East 40th Street in New York City. Individuals interested in learning more or to make an appointment, can call (212) 481-1219 or visit www.svcmc.org/gianna.
